Terry Fox set to run again on big screen

Hollywood treatment. L.A. studio expects to start shooting in Canada in a year and hopes to release film internationally in 2014

There have been two made-for-TV movies, one documentary and innumerable TV spots about the late, great Canadian icon Terry Fox, but never a feature film — until now.

Ontario native and L.A.-based producer Kelly Slattery was inspired to bring Fox's story to the silver screen by her father, who idolized the cancer-fighting amputee.

Slattery plans to donate 100 per cent of the proceeds to the Terry Fox Foundation.

"It will be a heartfelt film but with a cinematic feel, and to really have that cinematic, theatrical feel we do have to show some of the darkness," she said during a press junket in Vancouver Thursday, noting that Fox suffered from survivor's guilt, having watched so many teens and children succumb to cancer.

"The darkness conveys that he was human, because a hero has to be human."

Slattery grew up north of Toronto, where her father worked as vice-president of Adidas Canada. His devotion to the young man from Port Coquitlam began when Fox wrote the company requesting a donation of shoes to carry him through his Marathon of Hope, which ended up raising more than $24 million for cancer research.

Fox died in 1981, but since then the foundation that bears his name has raised more than $600 million for cancer research worldwide. Slattery's dad framed a copy of Fox's letter and she says growing up, Fox "was a religion in our house."

"(My dad) fashioned all of these concepts of morals and standards and things to oblige in this lifetime on the 'Terry Fox model,' which is: Don't be too boastful, just work really hard and suck it up, essentially."

She is currently negotiating to secure a $10-million budget for her film. Most of the prospective backers, oddly, are from the U.S., where Fox's name is relatively unknown.

Slattery says the Fox family has given her their blessing, and she in turn has given them the right to sign off on the final script. KATE WEBB/METRO

Motion passed

Metro Vancouver committee opposes coal-export expansion

The latest regional government to voice opposition to coal-export expansion may actually have some teeth.

Metro Vancouver's environment and parks committee passed a motion on Thursday to oppose any coal shipments not from the existing Robert Banks coal port — and the regional organization has the power to stop any future coal ports from getting an air-quality permit since it is responsible for the region's airshed.

"I don't know if there's any precedent for refusing an amendment to a permit, or if the province could intervene," committee chair and Vancouver Coun. Heather Deal said.

The motion, which the board must approve before it has clout, was passed as Port Metro Vancouver reviews an application to build a new coal port at the Fraser Surrey Docks.

Municipalities and health authorities across the region have expressed concerns about increased coal exports, with some worried about the health impacts and others, such as Vancouver, upset about exporting a climate-change-contributing substance.

But the port has taken notice of the public outcry. It will require the Fraser Surrey Docks do more public consultation, said Duncan Wilson, VP of corporate social responsibility.

Mixed-use community to replace 224 public housing units bulldozed after government sold land for about $300M

emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Six years after the B.C. government asked residents to move from a multimillion-dollar slice of Vancouver real estate, construction has finally started to replace the low-income homes that were bulldozed to make room for development.

Little Mountain resident Ingrid Steenhuisen had mixed emotions at the official groundbreaking of the property between Main and Ontario streets and 33rd and 37th avenues on Thursday morning.

Having the land sit vacant for years — save for four households that refused to vacate the site after the government sold it to developer Holborn Properties for approximately $300 million — "created unnecessary stress and hardship" for residents and displaced the community, Steenhuisen said.

Though she may have to leave the house her family has lived in since 1964, she and residents from the 224 public-housing units that were destroyed with the sale will get the first opportunity to live in the new development. It will include 234 social-housing apartments and 1,500 market-value units.

By selling the prime piece of real estate, the government was able to build social housing across the province including 1,500 units locally at 14 city-owned sites.

The province did this, though, by borrowing money against the property even though the developer hasn't yet paid full price. But Housing Minister Rich Coleman said the cash, all from the sale of Little Mountain, will be recouped within two to three years.

"We recognized this was going to take a bit of time, but I thought it was the right way to go," Coleman said. "I thought we did a very good job in transitioning this site."

The first 53-unit building is expected to be complete in 2015. The project will likely be built in three to four stages, Holborn CEO Joo Kim Tiah said, as the designs must go through re-zoning processes and consultations with the neighbourhood.

NDP's 'Alberta jobs plan' skewered

Election platform. Liberals say proposed tax increases will drive investment out of B.C., while CFIB gives lukewarm reception

matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

Iain Black sat at the head table of the Vancouver Board of Trade's Aboriginal Opportunities Forum Thursday and glossed over the NDP's just-announced 2013 platform fiscal plan with representatives of the new energy sector.

The reaction was less than stellar.

"'Well, that's just fine — I'll just move to Calgary' is what one of them told me as casually as you and I would talk about last night's Canucks score," VBOT president Black — a former B.C. Liberal cabinet minister — told Metro.

The fear of scaring away investors is set to become a major election issue as British Columbians go to the polls May 14.

The icy reception stems from the NDP's plan to increase corporate income tax by one per cent, permanently raise income taxes to 19 per cent on individuals making more than $150,000 a year (it's currently at 14.7 per cent, but scheduled to temporarily rise to 16.8), expand the carbon tax base and reintroduce a corporation capital tax on financial institutions.

"It's a grave mistake to underestimate the impact of increased income tax for the employers who sign the paycheques," said Black. "A dollar spent here will be worth less. It sends a message to investors that we're pulling away the welcome mat."

NDP finance critic Bruce Ralston said the measures ensure the party, if elected, can increase spending without inflating the provincial deficit beyond $790 million in 2013-14.

That's the "real Liberal deficit" hiding within the balanced 2013 provincial budget after "unrealistic" growth projections and "not credible" asset sales are taken out of the equation, Ralston argues.

The NDP's Bruce Ralston and Carole James present the party's fiscal plan for their 2013 election platform at Simon Fraser University's Harbour Centre Thursday. JENNIFER GAUTHIER/FOR METRO

"What we are making is some difficult decisions and we're laying out how we will pay for it," said Ralston at the fiscal plan's unveiling in Vancouver. "We are announcing tax increases now, before we talk about spending, instead of after the election."

The NDP is promising to balance their budget within four years, but Ralston said "it will take time to pay that down" without cutting public services.

The Canadian Federation of Independent Business, though pleased the small-business tax rate remains unchanged, also voiced their concerns with the plan.

"We wanted to see no deficit and a plan to reduce B.C.'s debt," said CFIB director of provincial affairs Mike Klassen. "(Our members) are business people, they know that if you can't pay off your bills you're not going to get very far."

The plan, which lays the foundation for the NDP's full platform reveal April 17, was met with disdain by the Liberals.

"It's an Alberta jobs plan," Finance Minister Michael de Jong heckled. "With these tax increases, we'll go back to the days investment fled and avoided B.C. Head offices will move away and jobs will go with it."

De Jong said the Liberals plan to table the exact same budget they did earlier this year if re-elected.

Mark your calendars

The two all-party election debates have now been set.

- Leaders Christy Clark (Liberals), Adrian Dix (NDP), John Cummins (Conservatives) and Jane Sterk (Green) will be taking part in an official radio debate on April 26, followed by a television debate on Monday, April 29 (6:30 p.m.).
- Meanwhile, Clark continues to challenge Dix to a one-on-one debate on Global TV.

Our students deserve better

Teachers are worried. Since guaranteed services for students with special needs were stripped from our contracts, many children are not receiving the support they need.

Illegal contract stripping has meant almost 1,500 fewer specialist teachers in BC.

Stances clear on B.C. carbon tax

'Venting' emissions. NDP's eye-catching proposal would fundamentally change how carbon taxes work

matt.kieltyka@metronews.ca

The NDP is making a bold decision to strengthen the carbon tax as provincial election campaigns ramp up.

The party released their 2013 platform fiscal plan Thursday and one of the most eye-catching proposals would fundamentally change how the carbon tax works in British Columbia.

While the rate ($30 per tonne) would remain the same, a New Democrat government would extend the tax's scope by closing a loophole to include "venting" emissions from oil and gas industries.

It would also use those extra revenues to fund transportation, and other green, infrastructure projects — meaning the tax would no longer be revenue neutral.

"It's not an increase of the carbon tax, it's an expansion to the range of emissions that the tax applies to," said NDP platform co-chair Bruce Ralston. "Our goal is to reduce emissions and spur innovation."

The announcement coincides with Clean Energy Canada at Tides Canada releasing a scorecard of party positions on the carbon tax.

The non-profit charity is advocating for an expansion of the tax, using money for green infrastructure solutions and a yearly $5 increase to its rate.

The NDP platform meets two of the three recommendations.

"The carbon tax is one of the best tools to fighting climate change," said Clean Energy Canada at Tides Canada director Merran Smith. "We think the sustainability of B.C.'s economy and landscape depends on our ability to address climate change. (The election) is absolutely the time to act."

Meanwhile, the BC Liberals have pledged to freeze the carbon tax.

Energy Minister Rich Coleman said extending the tax to oil and gas industries threaten to "kill" investment in the emerging liquefied-natural-gas sector.

"That's the reason we froze the carbon tax for five years, so people know the stability of where their investment will be," said Coleman. "(NDP plans are) just absolutely disgusting, frankly. They are economy-killing taxes, and they just don't get it."

911. Dispatcher calmed suicidal man armed with gun

A 911 dispatcher helped save the life of a suicidal man driving his truck near Vanderhoof in December who had been drinking, was on medication and was armed with a rifle.

A concerned family member gave authorities the man's cellphone number and the call-taker spent an hour making repeated attempts to stay in contact with him, despite several dropped calls and hang-ups.

"She continued to call back and was able to maintain intermittent contact with him," North District RCMP Const. Lesley Smith said in a statement.

The man told the dispatcher he was frustrated that he was being tracked by police and wanted to be left alone, but after a lengthy conversation she was able to learn where he was parked.

A police negotiator drove to the scene and, after several hours, got the man the medical help he needed.

City checks composting off green bucket list

Green-bin program. Get ready to start separating food scraps from the rest of your trash

emily.jackson@metronews.ca

The city will drop off the little green bins for food scraps at houses and duplexes across Vancouver as it prepares to roll out biweekly collection for regular garbage and weekly collection for compost starting May 1.

While some residents of the "greenest" city may choose not to compost due to the "yuck factor," Surrey, Port Coquitlam, Burnaby, Richmond, Coquitlam and North Vancouver already have similar programs.

Officials won't peer into garbage bins to see if people follow the rules, but the smell wafting from back alleys will be a telltale sign.

"It's not a complicated change, but it's change," Mayor Gregor Robertson said at a news conference on Thursday, where he demonstrated how to line a bucket with newspaper before scraping food into the vessel.

The move comes as Metro Vancouver plans to ban food scraps from the landfill by 2015.

"That's a valuable resource. We don't want to fill up the landfill with material we can be recycling into compost," Robertson said.

By the numbers

- It will cost about $16 per household this year to roll out the new way of handling trash, the city says. The project will cost $5.4 million this year, with costs per household expected to rise next year.
- The city expects to collect double the amount of food scraps — up to 50,000 tonnes per year — with its new program.

Mayor Gregor Robertson demonstrates how to use the green bins where Vancouver residents are expected to dump their compost. EMILY JACKSON/METRO

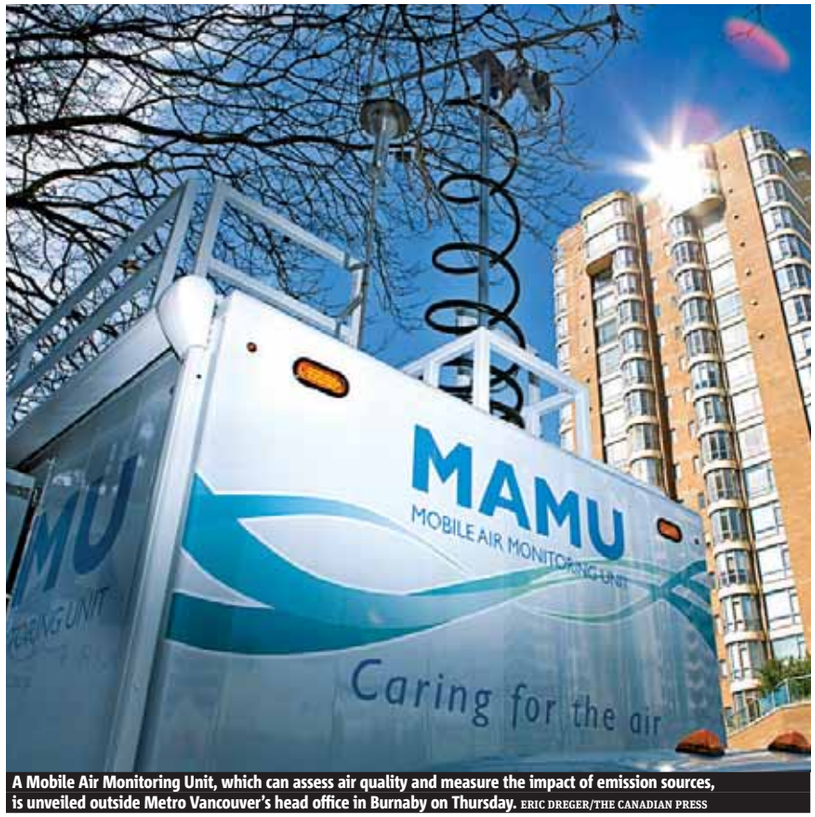
Meet MAMU, crusader for air-quality control

Mobile air-monitoring unit. Vehicle is Metro's new weapon in the fight against coal-export expansion



A Mobile Air Monitoring Unit, which can assess air quality and measure the impact of emission sources, is unveiled outside Metro Vancouver's head office in Burnaby on Thursday. ERIC DREGER/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Metro Vancouver mayors have a shiny new weapon to use in the battle against coal-export expansion plans in the Lower Mainland: a Ford F-450 truck named MAMU.

The regional district's new Mobile Air Monitoring Unit, or MAMU for short, will replace its 25-year-old predecessor and allow Metro to measure air quality at specific sites such as coal-storage and export facilities.

Vancouver Coun. Heather Deal, who chairs the Metro Vancouver environment and parks committee, was quick to highlight this capability, having just emerged from a committee meeting where district members expressed their opposition to expansion of coal exports anywhere in the Fraser Valley.

"We can send MAMU to do some background monitoring near a port that might have expansion of coal exports … so that if there are changes in air quality, we can measure it effectively," Deal said.

"In our air-quality-management plan, it explicitly states that we need to have continuous improvement in the region's air quality."

Metro mayors and environmental groups have expressed concerns about particulates in the air associated with coal transportation that could lead to serious health issues.

But Port Metro Vancouver has argued its coal terminals use dust-suppression systems that mitigate this threat.

Metro hasn't marketed its new mobile air-quality monitoring truck as a tool to use exclusively to target coal-export-expansion plans, but it's a piece of equipment fit for the job.

MAMU comes with a complement of on-board measurement tools and can transmit pollution data back to head office in real-time.

"Any industrial-emissions source that is of interest, this can be positioned near it and it can evaluate the air-quality impact associated with that emission," said Ken Reid, the regional district's superintendent of environmental monitoring.

The new rig is designed to handle add-ons, Reid said, such as a specialized monitor capable of detecting "ultra-fine particles" in the air, mostly related to transportation.

Metro Vancouver gathers air-quality data from 26 fixed monitoring stations across the Lower Mainland, but there are gaps in the coverage, Reid said.

In addition to dispatching MAMU to fill those gaps and monitor industrial emissions, Metro staff will send MAMU to test the air quality near industrial and forest fires.

MAMU cost $282,000 and replaces a similar mobile monitoring station that reached the end of its useful life this year.

Evidence admissible in Ponzi case

Gerald Berke THE CANADIAN PRESS

Evidence seized by police in Vancouver last year can be used against an 81-year-old man accused in an $81-million Ponzi fraud scheme in the U.S.

When Gerald Berke was arrested at his Vancouver home on Feb. 15, 2012, police checked his pockets and wallet, finding a credit card, Avis car-rental card and three USB flash drives.

The flash drives contained spreadsheet information that FBI investigators believe will aid their prosecution. They applied to have the material transferred to the United States when Berke is sent south to face trial.

Berke's lawyer argued the files should not be sent to the U.S. because they were protected by solicitor-client privilege.

B.C. Supreme Court Justice Bill Ehrcke, who earlier ordered Berke's extradition to California, said in a judgment released Thursday that only one flash-drive file should not be transferred, as it may be subject to solicitor-client privilege.

U.S. authorities allege that Berke operated a fraud scheme in Los Angeles that bilked more than 400 investors out of $81 million through his L.A. company, GJB Enterprises.

Berke told investors he was involved in the "factoring" business — he loaned businesses money needed for manufacturing.

UNDERSTANDING YOUR DENTAL COVERAGE

The Dental Plan Co-Payment

A dental plan is an important benefit to support good dental health. Know your plan and discuss treatment options with your dentist to make an informed decision about your dental care needs.

Dental plans are a valuable extended health benefit to offset some of the costs associated with dental care. Understanding your plan coverage in partnership with your dentist will help you avoid surprise costs.

What is the co-payment?

As with most insurance plans, there is usually a deductible—the amount you have to pay over and above your coverage. Many dental plans cover a percentage of the cost of treatment. Regardless of the actual costs, most dental plans cover between 50% to 80% of the cost of dental care. Any cost not covered by the dental plan is called the co-payment and it is the patient's responsibility to pay the dentist this amount.

Can my dentist waive the co-payment?

Dentists and certified specialists are legally and ethically required to collect the co-payment from patients. When the dentist and patient sign the dental claim form they are confirming the treatment provided and the total fee charged to the patient. You expect your dentist to be honest with you about the treatment you need. Your dental plan company expects the same honesty when your claim is submitted for payment.

Can I request that my dentist only provide care that's covered by my plan?

Your dentist or certified specialist is obligated to treat you, not your dental plan. Treatment recommendations are based on your dental health needs, which may differ widely from what your plan covers. You have the right to accept or refuse treatment but ensure you understand the implications refusing or delaying any recommended treatment may have on your health. Base your decision on an informed discussion with your dentist around your dental needs as this decision can impact your health and should not be dictated by your dental plan coverage.

How much do I actually have to pay?

Coverage will vary based on the plan purchased for you by your union or employer (or yourself). Most standard plans cover basic work at 80% including dental exams, x-rays, cleanings, fillings and root canals. Coverage for major procedures can be at 50% which usually includes more complex treatments such as crowns, bridges, veneers and dentures. Some plans might cover 100% for basic procedures and 60% or 70% for major, and so on. The patient is responsible for all costs not covered by the plan.

Know your plan coverage. Your dentist can help you understand your coverage and assist you in getting pre-determinations for treatment. This will provide you with an estimate of what will be covered by your plan, and what you will have to pay—before the treatment starts.

How are dental costs determined?

The British Columbia Dental Association produces an annual suggested fee guide for dentists and certified specialists in BC. The majority of insurance plans base coverage percentages on this guide.

Dentists and certified specialists in Canada do not follow a fee schedule and set their prices to cover: lab fees and quality materials required for your procedure paid directly by the dentist; salary costs; rent; mandatory continuing education; equipment; and all the related costs in running their dental practice. The co-payment is the difference between what your insurance plan pays and what your dentist charges.

Be an active participant in your dental health:

- Know your dental plan and what's covered before your dental appointment to understand your portion of costs.
- Plan for the future. Consider all your extended health costs when planning for your retirement.
- Discuss all treatment options with your dentist to make an informed decision based on your dental health needs. Understand any health risks associated with delaying or refusing treatment.
- Pay the required co-payment. You expect your dentist or certified specialist to be honest with you about the care you need, and so does the insurance company.
- Prevention is still the best treatment for everyone in your family: brush and floss daily; limit sugary drinks and snacks; don't smoke; and have an examination by a dentist at least once a year to diagnose problems before they become more complex and costly.

For more information talk to your dentist or visit bcdental.org to review a list of frequently asked questions on dental plans and the co-payment.

Jolie and the G8 supporting the 'forgotten victims' of war

Angelina Jolie brought her celebrity wattage to London on Thursday to back an urgent cause: fighting sexual violence in military conflicts. The Hollywood star joined British Foreign Secretary William Hague in announcing $36 million in additional funding from G8 nations to go toward preventing sexual violence and ensuring justice for its survivors. For too long, Jolie said, survivors of sexual violence have been "the forgotten victims" of wars in the Middle East, Africa and elsewhere. "Today, I believe that their voices have been heard," she said, alongside Hague, U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry and others at a meeting of foreign ministers from G8 nations. Baird not sorry for meeting on disputed land

Jerusalem. Palestinian Liberation Organization fears minister has set a 'dangerous precedent'

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird says he did not cross a line by holding a meeting with Israel's justice minister in her East Jerusalem office.

Baird met Tuesday with Tzipi Livni across the Green Line in disputed territory, which the Palestinians and the UN consider occupied land.

Baird says where he has coffee with someone is "irrelevant" to the larger discussion of Middle East peace and does not signal a shift in Canadian foreign policy.

"We're focused on trying to have an impact on the difficult and serious challenges, that being security for Israelis, an end to the conflict and the legitimate aspirations for a state from those in the Palestinian side," he said during a news conference in London, following a meeting of G8 foreign ministers.

Previous Canadian government ministers have avoided crossing into East Jerusalem with Israeli officials as a matter of principle and practice.

NDP foreign affairs critic Paul Dewar described the meeting as a misstep that betrayed "a serious lack of understanding about the conflict" in the Middle East.

Syria. Rebels say regime slaughtered civilians

Syrian government forces launched a counteroffensive in the south, capturing a town and killing at least 45 people, including women and children, opposition activists said Thursday.

The Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights activist group reported that they were killed by "shooting, shelling and field execution," a reference to people reported to have been shot at close range.

The attack on the town of Sanamein followed a rebel advance in the area in recent weeks. Rebels captured army bases and a major town in the strategic province of Daraa along the border with Jordan.

"They slaughtered any person they found," an activist in the nearby town of Busra al-Harir told The Associated Press via Skype. He would not give his name for fear of reprisal.

"This is the ugliest massacre since the one in Houla," he added, referring to a region where government forces killed more than 100 civilians in May.

Rebels advancing in the south in recent weeks have been aiming to secure a corridor from the Jordanian border to Damascus about 60 miles away in preparation for an assault on the capital.

An Open Letter to Canadians

RBC has been in the news this week in a way no company ever wants to be.

The recent debate about an outsourcing arrangement for some technology services has raised important questions.

While we are compliant with the regulations, the debate has been about something else. The question for many people is not about doing only what the rules require - it's about doing what employees, clients, shareholders and Canadians expect of RBC. And that's something we take very much to heart.

Despite our best efforts, we don't always meet everyone's expectations, and when we get it wrong you are quick to tell us. You have my assurance that I'm listening and we are making the following commitments.

First, I want to apologize to the employees affected by this outsourcing arrangement as we should have been more sensitive and helpful to them. All will be offered comparable job opportunities within the bank.

Second, we are reviewing our supplier arrangements and policies with a continued focus on Canadian jobs and prosperity, balancing our desire to be both a successful business and a leading corporate citizen.

Third, our Canadian client call centres are located in Canada and support our domestic and our U.S. business, and they will remain in Canada.

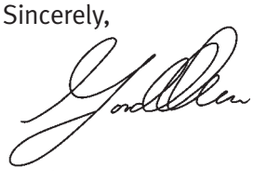
Fourth, we are preparing a new initiative aimed at helping young people gain an important first work experience in our company, which we will announce in the weeks ahead.

RBC proudly employs over 57,000 people in Canada. Over the last four years, despite a challenging global economy, we added almost 3,000 full-time jobs in Canada. We also hire over 2,000 youth in Canada each year and we support thousands more jobs through the purchases we make from Canadian suppliers. As we continue to grow, so will the number of jobs for Canadians.

RBC opened for business in 1864 and we have worked hard since then to earn the confidence and support of the community. Today, we remain every bit as committed to earning the right to be our clients' first choice, providing rewarding careers for our employees, delivering returns to shareholders who invest with us, and supporting the communities in which we are privileged to operate.

I'd like to close by thanking our employees, clients, shareholders and community partners for your input and continued support.

Sincerely,



Gord Nixon

HATEBASE AIMS TO PREVENT GENOCIDE BY TRACKING HATE SPEECH

JESSICA SMITH
Metro in Toronto

A Toronto-based non-governmental organization is tracking the use of hate speech around the world, hoping to help stop genocide before it starts.

The Sentinel Project recently launched Hatebase, a wiki-style website that asks the public to contribute to a multilingual dictionary of hateful words and to log incidents in which those words are used.

The Hatebase API allows users — potentially governments and NGOs — to map out and chart localized spikes and trends in hate speech in real time.

Spikes in hate speech, when combined with other knowledge about tensions in a region, can be an early warning sign of violence, or of violence escalating to genocide, said Timothy Quinn, an adviser with The Sentinel Project.

"When we start layering in hate speech, that gives us an indication — when it's spiking over time — that tensions are rising," he said.

For example, in Rwanda in the 1990s "inyenzi," meaning "cockroach," was a derogatory term for the Tutsi that escalated in use before the genocide, with radio announcers ultimately calling on people to exterminate the cockroach.

While the Sentinel Project focuses on preventing genocide, the upsurge in hateful language can also indicate other violence that doesn't necessarily amount to genocide.

What's in a word?

"Hate speech is really defined more by the intent than the word itself."

Timothy Quinn, Sentinel Project

"God knows, there's a lot that can happen before then that certainly warrants monitoring and intervention," Quinn said.

Defining hate speech, however, isn't easy.

"Hate speech is really defined more by the intent than the word itself," Quinn said. "There are some words that might have a benign meaning in some contexts, but in other contexts have a very malignant intent."

For example, without a deeper knowledge of the region, the use of "cockroach" in Rwanda in the '90s could be attributed to a cockroach infestation, instead of a brewing genocide.

The Hatebase dictionary is growing as more people with important knowledge about the world are beginning to use it, Quinn said.

"The spread of our users is global," he said. "We're starting to get a lot of very localized slurs, which we didn't have before."

Resolving issues with user-generated content

Relying on user-generated content isn't without its problems, said Timothy Quinn, an adviser with the Sentinel Project. Hatebase has attracted some people with political agendas who have started arguing over words and definitions that likely have very little value for organizations concerned about genocide.

"I've had a couple of Nazis that are pissed off at me. I've got a group of anti-feminists that are pissed off that we removed a word we didn't think was hate speech," Quinn said.

For example, some recent additions to the Hatebase wiki, such as "patriarchy," "cis male" and "white privilege," are found in academic language commonly used in women's studies. If those words were a sign of genocide, university campuses would be very scary places.

Fortunately, Hatebase can distinguish what inputs are relevant and doesn't bother with anything that doesn't relate to an area of concern, Quinn said. "Some of it is meaningful and some of it is not. Funnily enough, the stuff of dubious value is the stuff people fight about the most."

U.S. Senate rejects effort to block gun-control bill

Gun-control supporters in the U.S. Senate won the first showdown over how to respond to the December school shootings in Connecticut, defeating an effort by conservatives to derail firearms restrictions before debate could even start.

The 68-31 vote on Thursday gave an early burst of momentum to efforts by President Barack Obama and lawmakers to push fresh but modest gun curbs through Congress. The National Rifle Association, the top gun advocacy group, along with many Republicans and some moderate Democrats, say the proposals go too far.

The vote came four months after a gunman killed 20 young children and six staffers at a Connecticut school.

Expanded background checks of gun purchasers are at the core of the latest Democrat-led gun-control drive. Other top proposals — including bans on assault weapons and high-capacity ammunition magazines — will be offered as amendments during Senate debate but seem destined for defeat.

Background checks currently apply only to transactions handled by the country's 55,000 licensed gun dealers. Advocates of expanding the system say too many sales — the exact proportion is unknown — escape the checks, which are supposed to keep weapons from going to criminals, the seriously mentally ill and others.

"The hard work starts now," Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, a Democrat, said after the vote. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Japanese auto producers issue recall over airbags

Honda, Toyota and Nissan are recalling more than three million vehicles globally, including some 200,000 in Canada, for an identical problem with airbags on the passenger side whose inflator may burst, sending plastic pieces flying.

Toyota said it had received five reports of airbag problems, three in the U.S. and two in Japan, but there have been no injuries.

RBC apologizes for outsourcing mess

Mea culpa. Bank publishes open letter in response to furor over treatment of IT workers

Royal Bank's top executive apologized Thursday to the workers who are being affected by the bank's outsourcing arrangement with a foreign company, saying RBC should have been more sensitive and helpful to them.

The apology follows a backlash against the bank after some of its Canadian information technology workers complained they were being replaced by foreign workers working for a company contracted by RBC.

Chief executive Gord Nixon said in an open letter, to be published in Friday newspapers, that the bank is also reviewing its supplier arrangements and policies to balance its desire to be a successful business and a "leading corporate citizen."

He repeated assurances that all of the affected workers — about 45 people — will be offered comparable job opportunities at the bank, which is Canada's largest bank by assets.

"RBC has been in the news this week in a way no company ever wants to be," Nixon said in a letter distributed Thursday afternoon.

"While we are compliant with the regulations, the debate has been about something else. The question for many people is not about doing only what the rules require — it's about doing what employees, clients, shareholders and Canadians expect of RBC. And that's something we take very much to heart."

He also committed to a review of the bank's supplier agreements and to keep its call centres that support the bank's domestic and U.S. business in Canada.

In earlier statements and an interview that Nixon gave to CBC, the bank had said it expected and believed that its outsourcing supplier had complied with all relevant Canadian rules.

Austria. Police arrest man in Red Bull blackmail case

Austrian police have arrested a man suspected of blackmailing Red Bull by threatening to place cans of its energy drink contaminated with feces on supermarket shelves.

Police officials cited at a Salzburg news conference by the Austria Press Agency say the unidentified 47-year-old suspect was arrested Wednesday after he showed up for a payoff in the Lower Austrian town of Moedling.

Thursday's report didn't say how much the suspected blackmailer was demanding, or give other details.

An official answering the telephone at Salzburg police headquarters confirmed the arrest. The threats started coming in February by mail and email. Spot checks of stores across Austria showed no trace of tampering with the company's product.

Species is evolutionary snapshot in action

This image provided by Lee R. Berger and the University of the Witwatersrand shows a reconstruction of the skeleton of Australopithecus sediba, centre, next to a small-bodied modern human female, left, and a male chimpanzee.

The newly studied species lived some two million years ago, and it both climbed in trees and walked upright. Scientists are getting a more comprehensive look at the extinct South African creature with an intriguing mix of human-like and primitive traits, but scientists say they still haven't pinned down where it fits on our evolutionary family tree. Put your best foot forward

- When people walk, they strike the ground with the heel first. But that would be disastrous for A. sediba's narrow heel bone, so, instead, the creature struck the ground first with the outside of the foot, the authors propose.

RE: Earth to PMO: We're Doomed, published April 4

I wanted to tell you that I really enjoy reading your paper in Calgary.

In the April 4 edition of Metro news Calgary the article, Earth to PMO: We're doomed by John Mazerolle, was so funny I laughed myself silly.

When I got home, I shared the article with my husband and he laughed so hard, too.

I have no doubt the script from the real PMO's office would read much the same, almost word for word, if a meteor were on its way.

Thanks for a thoughtful and hilarious article.

Synopsis

42 covers roughly two years in Jackie Robinson's (Chadwick Boseman) life, the period in which he went from unknown minor league player to the man who broke the colour barrier in professional baseball. In 1947 there were 400 players in Major League Baseball, 399 white team members and Robinson. Recruited by Branch Rickey (Harrison Ford), owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers, the first baseman withstood racism from teammates, fans and opposing players to become an icon of the game and civil rights movement.

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Field of equal dreams

42. The realities of 1940s racism aren't toned down in this Jackie Robinson biopic

Richard: Mark, I liked this movie. It's an old-fashioned Hollywood biopic, and I think as that it works well, but I can't start any conversation about the movie without mentioning Harrison Ford's performance. He's the gruff old coot Branch Rickey and Harrison brings him to life with cigar and eyebrow acting, hurumphing his way through the role in an entertaining, but decidedly hammy fashion. What did you make of his performance?

Mark: Richard, there is no movie WITHOUT Harrison Ford. Everyone else is pretty one dimensional, good or evil, including Robinson himself. But Ford brings a little craziness to a very sober biopic. Rickey's a hard guy to figure out, which is good. Is he just a savvy businessman, as he claims? A closet idealist? An egomaniac looking to claim a place in the history books? Ford always keeps us guessing, which is more than the rest of the movie does. I liked the movie, but really, when the bad guys are redneck racists in the 1940s it's like shooting catfish in a barrel.

RC: I liked Ford too but you take those eyebrows away and there's not a whole lot left to that character. 42 is a melodramatic Hollywood biopic with one big moment after the next buoyed by a swelling soundtrack and loads of stock characters, but writer/director Brian Helgeland doesn't shy away from the harder edged aspects of the story. He tackles the racism Robinson was greeted with head on and it is often uncomfortable to watch.

MB: All too true, and you just can't believe that kind of overt racism occurred only 70 years ago. But, oh, that soundtrack! Stop telling me how to feel; I feel it already! By the way, I thought Chris Meloni played an interesting character, a flawed human being with a good essence. I wish he had been in the movie more. And the film had a nice sense of time and place. But although Robinson himself is a hero, he's forced by history to be a bit of a bore, which is not good for the movie.

RC: I thought Chadwick Boseman showed some of the tenacity, talent and strength of character that made Robinson a legend.

MB: He was excellent at conveying Robinson's noble purpose. But you know what they say about the Bible: it's the Devil that has the best part!

You won't regret this in the morning

On the lam with Redford

The Company You Keep. Actor talks Weather Underground and gets philosophical about searching for the truth in journalism

MATT PRIGGE
Metro World News in New York

The Company You Keep, the ninth film Robert Redford has directed — and only the third he has starred in as well — concerns former members of the Weather Underground, the militant, and sometimes violent, anti-Vietnam War organization. A longtime Hollywood liberal, Redford has spoken of the film's political nature elsewhere. But today he discusses its other aspects.

"If you had to break it down in terms of which (theme) is more important, the one for my character is obvious: the love of his daughter," he explains.

When the Feds start rounding up ex-members responsible for a violent bank robbery, Redford's character, who's innocent of those charges, goes on the lam to clear his name.

"What happens when you're passionate and totally committed to something in your youth, and then that evaporates? You grow out of that position and you're still stuck because of the trap you created for yourself when you were young. What is the cost of that? (The film is) not about that event that took place in 1970. That's the kick-off. It's about their lives right now."

When journalists talk to Redford, inevitably All the President's Men, the 1976 film about the revelation of Watergate, comes up.

"That was not about Watergate. That was not about President Nixon," he maintains. "It was about those two guys and the work that they did. I wanted to put a light on something I didn't think many people knew about, which is: how do journalists work? How do they get a story?"

The film's portrait of journalism doesn't quite mesh with today. "(Journalism has) changed so drastically, because of the democratization of information. Anyone can put something up. So now it's harder and harder to find what the truth is," he says, pointing out that there's less regulation of the press now. "The rules that governed journalism when I was younger said you had to get two people to go on record before you could quote a source. That's gone. What took it away was the need to compete. You had to scoop. Sometimes you couldn't wait around to do the ethical thing. You had to jump to get ahead of the next guy. It makes Watergate look like a piece of history. It can't come back."

The Sapphires

Director. Wayne Blair

Stars. Chris O'Dowd, Deborah Mailman, Jessica Mauboy

At the height of the girl group craze of the late 1960s four Australian Aboriginal teens, tutored by piano player and manager Dave Lovelace (Chris O'Dowd), take a shot at fame. And try not to get shot at during their gigs singing for the troops in Vietnam. The Sapphires is at its best when it embraces its light and fluffy soul. Romances swirl, as do glittery costumes. It's a slight, but entertaining take, with great performances, on the effect of music to change people's lives. RICHARD CROUSE

Crime

Trance

Director. Danny Boyle

Stars. James McAvoy, Vincent Cassel, Rosario Dawson

Director Danny Boyle's film about an amnesiac (James McAvoy) who sees a hypnotherapist (Rosario Dawson) to uncover his memories of a valuable, stolen painting brings together film noir, psychological drama and thrills in one twisty-turny story. This is stylish, disorienting filmmaking that disguises what's real and what isn't. Occasionally, however, it feels as though there are too many bends in the story. No spoilers here — but the old saying, "Buy the ticket, take the ride," applies. RICHARD CROUSE

Drama

The Place Beyond the Pines

Director. Derek Cianfrance

Stars. Ryan Gosling, Bradley Cooper, Eva Mendes

Cianfrance's backwoods grand opera traces a tragic event as it ripples over nearly 20 years. Gosling is extraordinary as a disturbed jittery drifter/bank robber who can charm a crying baby. Cooper appears an hour in for one brief, violent exchange with Gosling and the story becomes his. This 140-minute moral cat-and-mouse game is smart and intriguing, with a unique structure, a restrained, effective script and masterful direction, and top notch performances at every level. ANNE BRODIE

Documentary

Revolution

Director. Rob Stewart

Saving the world is a lofty goal for a documentary, but that's not stopping Rob Stewart from trying with Revolution. After championing the cause against shark finning in Sharkwater, Stewart realized that saving sharks was just the tip of the iceberg; ocean acidification would wipe out pretty much everything in the water unless we seriously alter our lifestyles. As altruistic as his cause is, as a film, Revolution is flimsy at best. The narrative, part travelogue, part nature film, is muddled. Stewart throws out facts like moral thunderbolts but does a poor job of summating his position. IAN GORMELY

Drama

Renoir

Director. Gilles Bourdos

Stars. Michel Bouquet, Christa Theret

This biopic focuses on famous Impressionist painter Pierre-Auguste Renoir and his legendary filmmaker son Jean Renoir during the height of the First World War. When a model mysteriously arrives at the family estate, she becomes the (persistently naked) muse of both father and son. Renoir may have a slightly staid sense of momentum but an accomplished cast and gorgeous photography lend itself to this tribute to two of France's celebrated geniuses. STEVE GOW

Saving the world, one

"Revolution is a film about how humans are going to survive the next hundred years. We follow life as a character through 3.5 billion years of evolution, five mass extinctions that almost wiped life off the face of the planet, culminating in humans in the midst of another one of these extinctions."

LOSE UP TO 20 POUNDS IN 28 DAYS!

The Fast Metabolism Diet: Eat More Food and Lose More Weight by Haylie Pomroy

On this plan you're going to eat a lot: three full meals and two snacks a day. You won't count calories or fat, or ban entire food groups, but you'll set your metabolism on fire with this simple and proven plan.

"This is not a fad diet. It's a medically proven method of food as medicine to fight obesity, cure chronic illness, and heal a broken metabolism."
Dr. Jacqueline Fields M.D.

"I lost 6 pounds my first week!"
Constance, Mississauga

OUR TAKE ON THE WORLD OF CELEBRITIES

The Word

Kristen Stewart crashes a little kid's party — sort of

Dorothy Robinson
scene@metronews.ca

Look. I know the members of Hanson are old and they have, like, 23 kids between them (even the baby drummer has procreated — twice).

I've interviewed them several times and the voice on the other end wasn't prepubescent (they are also supersensitive to people thinking they are teenagers, something I learned the hard way when I squealed, "You are so grown up!" to them.)

I've even listened to their later albums. What I'm saying is: I know they are old and capable of partying.

But when I read on E! News that Kristen Stewart decided to celebrate her 23rd birthday by crashing a record release party for the band at L.A. nightspot No Vacancy, my first thought was, "What is KStew doing with a bunch of eight-year-olds?"

Apparently, if you broke out as a little person, I will always consider you a little person (don't get me started on Lil' Bow Wow.)

Anyway, according to E!, the birthday girl arrived around 11 p.m. with Robert Pattinson and about 10 friends in tow, though it was unclear if they knew ahead of time about the band's party.

"They weren't overly affectionate or anything, but at points they were standing together as they talked to friends," a source says of Stewart and Pattinson.

And then Hanson played pin-the-tail on the donkey, ate confetti cake and all three had temper tantrums when they were told it was bedtime. I'm so sorry, Hanson. Next interview we do together, impress me with your 401K plan and maybe I'll wrap my head around the fact of your aging.

Madonna

Madonna feud heating up

Madonna's ongoing feud with Malawi President Joyce Banda isn't getting any better, with Banda now blasting the singer for reportedly demanding expedited travel privileges for herself and her entourage for a recent visit to the country, according to Yahoo! News.

"Granted, Madonna is a famed international musician," Banda says in a statement. "But that does not impose an injunction of obligation on any government under whose territory Madonna finds herself, including Malawi, to give her state treatment. Such treatment, even if she deserved it, is discretionary."

Liquid Assets

The wrap on Pinot grigio

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Much like a human union, when it comes to food and wine, the bride often comes with an entourage that can't be ignored.

Big holiday meals are a classic example. Though the turkey might be the star of the show, every side dish puts its two cents worth into how successful the outcome of the liquid pairing will be.

Wraps create an everyday conundrum. They're sort of like an elaborate meal rolled into one conveniently edible package.

This week's lead recipe combines smoked salmon (that works with many wines, from a pinot noir red to a white, german off-dry riesling), creamy avocado (a chardonnay fan) and capers (which prefer a rosé).

The trick is to find a harmonious middle ground, and with this dish, all roads lead to pinot grigio. Typically a light, lean, easy-going style of white wine, it meets many ingredients halfway. With its subtle honeyed flavour and citrusy backbone, Mezzacorona's 2012 Pinot Grigio ($11.95 to $15.99) has a bit more heft than the average PG, making it a versatile wrap wine.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

My version of a lox and cream cheese sandwich has fewer calories, less fat, and more interesting and tasty ingredients! The light ricotta and cream cheese combination is the key substitute for regular cream cheese.

This recipe serves eight. LORELLA VANETTI, FROM ROSE REISMAN'S COMPLETE LIGHT KITCHEN (WHITECAP BOOKS)

Ingredients

- 1/3 cup smooth light ricotta
- 2 tbsp light cream cheese
- 1/3 cup goat cheese
- 2 tbsp light mayonnaise
- 2 tsp freshly squeezed lemon juice
- 1 tsp Dijon mustard
- 1/2 tsp crushed fresh garlic
- pinch freshly ground black pepper
- 4 large tortillas (preferably whole wheat)
- 4 pieces leafy lettuce
- 4 oz smoked salmon, diced
- 1/2 cup diced red onion
- 1/2 cup diced ripe avocado
- 1 tbsp capers

1. Purée the ricotta, cream cheese, goat cheese, mayonnaise, lemon juice, mustard, garlic and pepper in a small food processor, or with a hand beater, until smooth.

2. Divide the cheese mixture among the tortillas, spreading it to 1/4 inch from the edges. Place the lettuce overtop.

3. Scatter the salmon, onion, avocado and capers over the lettuce. Roll the bottom of each tortilla up and over the filling, fold in the sides and roll the tortilla up tightly. Cut in half before serving.

Chemistry key for Canucks forward Derek Roy

The Vancouver Canucks, not all that long ago, were lean at the centre position, relying on Andrew Ebbett and Jordan Schroeder to fill the gaps.

Then came the acquisition of Derek Roy, followed almost immediately by the return of Ryan Kesler from a broken foot.

In four games Roy's offensive output has yielded one assist, coming in his first match on a perfect pass to Chris Higgins, who is now out of the lineup with a lower-body injury.

Prior to the injury, the trio of Roy, Higgins and Jannik Hansen had been creating chances with no tangible results.

"Sometimes you get more chemistry with other players than some others," said Roy earlier this week.

"We've got to find the back of the net a little more. We're missing a lot of chances and in the playoffs we're going to need those to go in, for sure."

Whitecaps make return to the dome

MLS. Kenny Miller's status for Saturday against Real Salt Lake still up in the air due to ailing hamstring

CAM TUCKER
cam.tucker@metronews.ca

It's been awhile — exactly six weeks this Saturday — since the Vancouver Whitecaps last played a match at home. Don't worry, the wait will soon be over.

Saturday, the local Major League Soccer side, which had been on a three-game road trip, will host Real Salt Lake at BC Place. The big question heading into the match is whether Kenny Miller will be available for selection.

The Scottish striker has recently been bothered by a hamstring injury, and did not play in the Whitecaps' 1-1 draw with the San Jose Earthquakes last week.

"Still not 100 per cent sure," head coach Martin Rennie told reporters Thursday when asked if Miller would be available against Salt Lake.

"He trained a little bit today and we'll just need to see how he is tomorrow."

Most of Thursday's training session at UBC was closed to the media. When it was opened, Miller had already left the field for treatment.

The inspired performances Miller put in early this season have been almost the complete opposite of what Whitecaps observers witnessed in 2012, after he signed and arrived last summer as a designated player earning $1.2 million in salary.

In three matches this season he scored twice, which already equals his goal production over 13 games last year.

In Miller's absence last weekend, the Whitecaps turned not to Darren Mattocks, the thrilling Jamaican striker who led the team in goals last season, but to 22-year-old Corey Hertzog, who didn't play an MLS game all of last year but earned the start with his showing in reserve matches this spring.

Hertzog, a free-agent signing of the Whitecaps in January, scored his first career MLS goal in his first career start.

Hertzog had strep throat earlier in the week, but he said he's feeling better now and hoping to build on a strong performance by playing against Real Salt Lake.

"It just brings a lot of confidence into my play, which is a big thing," said Hertzog.

Garcia enjoys major lead 'while it lasts'

Golf. Spaniard shares top spot with Leishman after opening with 66

Sergio Garcia GETTY IMAGES

Sergio Garcia is still chasing that first major title.

It never figured to come at Augusta National.

But there he was Thursday, after a bogey-free opening round, sharing the top spot on the leaderboard at the Masters.

"Obviously, this is not my most favourite place," Garcia said, trying to be diplomatic. "But we try to enjoy it as much as we can every time we come here. Sometimes it comes out better than others. Today was one of those good days. Let's enjoy it while it lasts."

Garcia's 6-under 66 tied him with Aussie Marc Leishman on a cloudy day that was made for going low. The Spaniard took advantage, rekindling memories of the teen phenom who seemed certain to win numerous major titles after he battled with Tiger Woods at the 1999 PGA Championship, losing by a single stroke.

Garcia has challenged in other majors, but rarely at the Masters — a course that doesn't seem to fit his style or shaky putter. In 14 appearances at Augusta National, he has finished in the top 10 only twice.

This year, Woods is still the favourite after opening with a 70. But it appears he'll have a lot of competition.

"I felt like I putted well today," said Woods, whose only lower opening-round score at Augusta was a 68 in 2010. "We've got a long way to go.... The golf course is going to change dramatically. You've just got to make adjustments."

Burrows a bright spot outside the Vancouver spotlight

THE HOCKEY NEWS
Edward Fraser
vancouver@metronews.ca

With the number of big names on the Canucks, it's easy to overlook players who would stand out on other teams. Alex Burrows, who turned 32 Thursday, falls into this category.

Burrows, in his seventh full NHL season, has been a jack of all trades for the past five, consistently scoring while playing a well-rounded game and filling any hole that may arise. He's made his name playing alongside the Sedins on the first line, but he can drop down the depth chart when needed and not miss a beat. Need a power-play guy? Burrows is fourth among Canucks forwards in PP time on ice. A man down? Burrows is one of the first skaters over the boards, second on the squad in short-handed time on the ice. He can play the game with speed, he can play it on the cycle (hence fitting so well with Henrik and Daniel) or he can play it in the proverbial alley.

Though his stats are down this year, he still leads the team in goals with 12. And in a stat that would surprise more than a few, I suspect, Burrows has the second-most goals of any Canuck during the past half decade with 125, only 17 behind Daniel's 142 and nine clear of Ryan Kesler's 116. Henrik, with 95, and Mason Raymond, with 71, round out the top five. A big reason for Burrows' success has been durability. Over the past seven seasons he's missed just 13 games, remarkable considering his style.

Players as versatile as Burrows, who was never drafted, are hard to find. And the Canucks know it. That's why on Sept. 14, the day before the last CBA expired, they handed him a four-year extension that will kick in 2013-14 worth an average of $4.5 million per, a 150 percent raise over the $2 million he made this season and the three before it.

Relative to others around the league making similar money, he's worth every penny. It's time to stop overlooking him.

Canada's Sports HOF

Sakic leads new class of inductees

Hockey Hall of Famer and two-time Stanley Cup champion Joe Sakic headlines this year's list of inductees into Canada's Sports Hall of Fame.

Sakic, who had 1,641 career regular-season points over 20 seasons in the NHL, won league championships with the Colorado Avalanche in 1996 and 2001. He also won titles at the Winter Olympics, world hockey championship, World Cup of Hockey, world junior championships and Memorial Cup.

Others named in the athlete category on Thursday include cyclist Alison Sydor, curler Russ Howard and Paralympian Andre Viger. Former Canadian Amateur Hockey Association president Murray Costello and sport-development architect Dr. Jean-Guy Ouellet will be inducted as builders. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
If someone questions your motives or authority today, you must make it clear to them that you are the boss and you will do as you please. Say it nicely, of course, but make sure they know that you mean it.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Certain people seem to believe you exist solely to look out for their interests. Now is the time to remind them you have needs of your own and that they must come first — always.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You may want to explain your actions to loved ones, though chances are they won't understand so why waste the time. Do what you have to do and let them figure it out.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
What is the one thing you desire above all? Is there a chance you will get it soon? If not, don't give up. Make your plans then take a step in the right direction and keep going.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
The planets will have you rushing around in all directions today. One moment you'll be going this way, the next you'll be going that way, and half an hour later it will be all change again. Time for a vacation.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Why have you allowed your fears to get the better of you? Whatever your problems, you are exaggerating them to such an extent that it is stopping you from taking action. Believe that things will get better.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
It's not like you to get upset over trivial things but you have allowed minor everyday matters to get under your skin. Don't worry, over the weekend you'll find reasons to smile.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
What is destined to happen will happen. The sooner you accept that, the sooner you can start turning events to your advantage. Don't dread the future, welcome it.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Pluto begins one of its retrograde phases today, which warns of confusion in your dealings with powerful people. It may seem as if they are being unreasonable but be patient. Everything will be OK.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Whatever you decide to do today, someone is sure to be unhappy about it. But that must not stop you from taking whatever action you think is correct. Remember: You cannot please everyone.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
You will clash with someone whose way of looking at the world is very different from your own, on the surface at least. Dig a little deeper and you may find you are alike.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
A friend will do something today that you find hard to understand. It may seem as if they are acting irresponsibly but you could also be expecting too much.
